

Today's Google Doodle dedicated to Edison

As usual, Google's Doodle are something special: today it marks the 164th birthday of great inventor Thomas Alva Edison.

The Edison Doodle showcases his major inventions like the electric bulb, the phonograph and the kinetoscope among others. The online search firm never forgets to depict its name, 'GOOGLE', on the Doodle.

A close observation of the Doodle reveals the consonants of the world's most popular search engine morphed on several instruments that had been invented by Edison.

Shiny, inventive, creative!
