

Google Drive: this time is for real (will the real cloud storage please stand up?)

Get yourself into Google Drive right now by clicking here!

Google is introducing its cloud storage service aiming directly Dropbox, SkyDrive and Box.net (along several others).

You can get started with 5GB of storage for free—that's enough to store the high-res photos of your trip to the Mt. Everest, scanned copies of your grandparents' love letters or a career's worth of business proposals, and still have space for the novel you're working on. You can choose to upgrade to 25GB for $2.49/month, 100GB for $4.99/month or even 1TB for $49.99/month. When you upgrade to a paid account, your Gmail account storage will also expand to 25GB.

Via [Google Blog]