Oh, well... it's about time!

Twitter announced their very own Twitter plug-in for WordPress blogs that makes it easier to embed tweets, optimize your posts and content to Twitter-dome and - quite cool - integrate with Twitter Analytics (yes, that one).

I'm about to install it on my WordPress blogs and test it even though I've been using several other post-to-tweet plugins - which have been around for a while - along with some PHP code I wrote by myself.
